Marketing Expert Turned Lawyer Chooses Relationships Over Clicks

WHY ONE ATTORNEY BELIEVES STRATEGIC RELATIONSHIPS OUTPERFORM MOST MARKETING TACTICS

By Stephen Furnari, Corporate Attorney & Owner, Ripple Coworking

Most solo and small firm attorneys I meet fantasize about a marketing shortcut. Search engine optimization. Google Ads. Social media. Artificial intelligence.

The hope is often the same: find a system that reliably generates new clients.

That's what makes transactional attorney Vincent Ferrer's perspective interesting. Before becoming an attorney, Ferrer spent nearly a decade as a marketing director helping businesses attract and retain customers.

Yet despite understanding marketing better than most lawyers, he believes one of the most effective marketing strategies remains surprisingly old-fashioned: building relationships and creating value through introductions.

WHY RELATIONSHIPS STILL WIN

Ferrer believes legal services remain fundamentally relationship-driven. While technology can increase visibility, trust is still built person-to-person. Referrals often come from people who know your reputation long before they need your services. Despite his digital marketing chops, when Ferrer markets, he seeks connections, not clicks.

THE POWER OF STRATEGIC INTRODUCTIONS

One of Vincent's most effective habits is making introductions between people who can help each other. While many professionals focus on collecting contacts, he focuses on creating connections. Over time, those relationships compound into trust, opportunities, and referrals.

BUILD A RELATIONSHIP SYSTEM

Many attorneys approach networking opportunistically. Vincent approaches it systematically.

Rather than relying on memory, he actively manages a list of approximately 120 professional relationships, tracking introductions he wants to make and opportunities to help others. The goal isn't immediate business—it's creating value consistently over time.

Just as marketing campaigns are built on repetition and follow-up, professional relationships grow through small actions performed regularly. Over time, those interactions compound into trust, stronger networks, referrals, and opportunities.

For attorneys looking to grow their practice, the lesson is simple: don't leave networking to chance. Build a system and work it consistently.

NETWORKING LESSONS YOU CAN USE TODAY

SYSTEMATIZE RELATIONSHIP BUILDING

Many attorneys network when they need business. Top networkers build systems that keep them in regular contact with their network, and can be delegated to staff.

PRIORITIZE CONSISTENCY

A quick check-in every week is more effective than a large networking push once or twice a year. Relationships compound through frequency.

TRACK KEY RELATIONSHIPS

Vincent actively manages approximately 120 professional relationships, tracking opportunities to reconnect, make introductions, and provide value.

CREATE VALUE REGULARLY

Look for ways to help others before they ask. The goal isn't immediate business—it's becoming a trusted resource over time.

MAKE IT A HABIT

Schedule networking activities just like client work. Relationships grow when follow-up becomes a routine rather than an afterthought.

“The most valuable relationships aren't built when you need something. They're built through consistent contact, shared experiences, and finding ways to help others succeed.”

— VINCENT FERRER
Transactional Attorney

JOB POSTINGS

Hawkins & Burt is looking for an experienced Attorney for a possible partnership association.

Hawkins & Burt, PLLC (formerly Hawkins, Hawkins & Burt, LLP) is seeking to add an experienced attorney as a possible partner to its practice. We are looking for a Florida attorney, in good standing, with 4+ years of experience, who is familiar with Clio or similar practice management systems and is comfortable working independently. The successful candidate will maintain direct client relationships and will be expected to practice law with efficiency, professionalism and flexibility.

Hawkins & Burt's practice is currently limited to Estate planning, including wills and trusts; Probate and Trust administration; and Probate and Trust litigation, representing both Petitioners and Respondents. It is not required that the successful candidate has experience in these types of cases.

This opportunity is well-suited for a lateral attorney who may not be actively job-seeking but is open to a conversation about a more sustainable, well-supported platform for their practice. We understand that experienced attorneys value discretion, autonomy, and balance-and we approach lateral discussions with professionalism, confidentiality and respect.

Why This Opportunity May be Worth a Conversation:

- A Better Platform: An established firm with the infrastructure to support your existing and future clients.
- Autonomy with Collaboration: Run your matters independently, with experienced colleagues available when needed.
- Mentorship Without Oversight Fatigue: Collegial guidance, not micromanagement.
- Sustainable Practice Model: A culture that prioritizes long-term success and work-life balance.
- Compensation Aligned with Experience: Fee-based structure with meaningful upside.
- Portable Practice Welcome: If you have a book of business, it will be respected and supported.

If you are an experienced attorney who is quietly exploring what the next chapter of your practice could look like, we welcome a confidential inquiry. If interested, contact David Burt at 386-252-4499 or davidburt@hawkinsandburt.com
